The Parties shall accordingly apply domestic support as determined in multilateral agricultural negotiations within the framework of the WTO Agreement, and when a Party decides to support its agricultural producers it shall endeavour to work towards domestic support measures that:

- (a) Have minimal or no trade-distorting effects or effects on production; and
- (b) conform fully to the provisions of Annex 2 of the Agreement on Agriculture, which is a part of the WTO Agreement.

2. To ensure transparency in agricultural support policies, the Parties agree to conduct ongoing monitoring and analysis of support measures applied. To that end, they shall use as their main reference the information contained in their respective annual notifications to the WTO Committee on Agriculture and shall send a copy thereof directly to each other. Without prejudice to the foregoing, each Party may request additional information or clarification from the other Party, which shall reply promptly. Consultations on the resulting evaluation may take place between the Parties if one of them so requests in the Committee on Trade in Goods.

3. The Parties express their willingness to act together with a view to achieving, at multilateral level, such adjustment to the provisions of Annex 2 of the WTO Agreement on Agriculture as will ensure effectively that the measures set forth therein cause no distortion to agricultural trade or production. Accordingly, in their reciprocal trade the Parties may initiate investigations into unfair trade practices in connection with any measures which may cause or threaten to cause injury to the production or trade of the other Party, where such measures depart from the fundamental provisions of Annex 2 and/or Article 6.4(b) of the WTO Agreement on Agriculture.

Exports Subsidies on Agricultural Products

As from five years following the entry into force of this Protocol, neither Party may maintain or introduce export subsidies on agricultural goods in reciprocal trade.
